I just found out about this now in December 2015 and I'm sad. I got to know Glenn back in 1972 when his band Wild Turkey opened up for Yes in Chicago. I was part of the original Billy Joel band who opened up for a White Turkey. When I started writing chapters for my book, I contacted Glenn and had the best conversation with them. This conversation led to many conversations over the years. I recently just thought about him and found this information. He was one of the most friendly guys I've ever met in my life and a damn good bass player if I do say so myself. Gone too young, way too soon....
